

As an investor, you should expect some volatility and bumps in the road and you may be wondering if you should be taking action with your retirement accounts. Investors who stayed the course generally see the value of their investments rebound. Remember the bigger picture: Market volatility now doesn't necessarily imply negative market returns in the future.

- Do you have questions about your retirement accounts due to the recent market volatility?
- Are you nearing retirement and have concerns about your investments due to declining markets and coronavirus worries?

Principal has prepared these market volatility resources to help you.

Volatility doesn't change our commitment to you at Principal®. Although volatility is typically a short-term phenomenon, we're not advocating short-term, reactive investment decisions. A practical investment approach is generally based on a long-term view and your time horizon.

It is never a bad time to invest in your future, and a retirement savings account can assist you with long-term planning. Take advantage of Guest Services matching 401(k) contributions to help you reach your retirement goals sooner! Click here to get started.